

2025 RRCC Turkey Shoot

It was darn cold at 8:00 a.m. on Saturday morning, the 22nd of November 2025. There was about a quarter inch of frost on the work tables. At least it was calm early in the day. The winds picked up a bit later. Not quite sure on the headcount, but it looked like 14 pilots showed up to compete. The usual rules applied, and we marched through two rounds of flying. Third place was taken by Ivan, a new member who has only flown five times (not counting thousands of hours on a simulator). Second place was secured by Cameron with his Tower Sport (a very stable airplane in a wind). First place went to Will, despite nearly demolishing his Folker Triplane on the safety fence, pits, and sunshade (amazing how much asymmetric drag is produced by a balloon stuck to an upper wing tip of a WWI model). Thank you to everybody who put together the event, participated, and spectated!
